I tempt you more? MORE? More you say!? Then feast your eyes on this tasty morsel from Miss Sember's The Parchment Paper Cookbook!

First, I'm going to have the Caramel Pear THEN the Root Beer Beef & Broccoli. I like dessert first. So I can have a second dessert after dinner. And to think, all this can be yours! But first, compete for my affection! As promised earlier in the post, I concocted a contest for this New Reader Giveaway. Oh, did you think it would be easy? Well, it is and fun!

Since it is getting rather frigid outside, I thought this time we'd have a theme recipe! Nothing warms the tummy and the heart like a warm soup or hearty stew. Lately, I've been scouring the city in search of soups. So far, creamy tomato, French onion soup, potato & leek soup, and of course, My Nanna's Homemade Beef Stew have been my favorites of the season so far.

Simply send in a video of you making your favorite soup or stew or gumbo. All of your videos will be watched by myself and a panel of other gluttons. If you can't send in your recipe in video format, at least send in lots of really good photos with your recipe.

The most sumptuous stew or soup will WIN a FREE copy of The Parchment Paper Cookbook by Brette Sember! PLUS, I'll put your video up on Super College Chef! Fame and free stuff, who could ask for more?

Please email your submissions to lizquerusio@yahoo.com. Good luck! I can't wait to be amazed!

Love,

Liz
