

"A family law attorney, Sember presents a flip book for divorced parents - one half for residential parents, the other for nonresidential parents. Each part offers commonsense advice on similar topics, e.g., long-distance parenting, dealing with the other parent, holidays, and scheduling, with content customized to the appropriate parenting role. Sember's level of empathy is as refreshing as it is unexpected; she focuses on the child's best interests a la Mary Ellen Hannibal in Good Parenting Through Your Divorce, often advising readers to suck it up for their kids' sake. Direct and encouraging in tone, Sember frequently dictates conduct (e.g., speak with respect, do not yell) and presents lists of dos, don'ts, things to say, and things not to say. If you're looking for affordable advice (from a lawyer, no less), this is good counsel. Highly recommended.
